"CLOSE UP, BOYS!" THE BARBECUE AT CARTERSVILLE.

A Grand Outpouring of the People, Pervid Appeals for the True Democracy, Unchanging Hostility to Radicalism, and a Firm Front for Lester.

CARTERSVILLE, GA., October 31 .- About ninety days ago-to be exact, on the 12th was one solid mass of People, alive with enthusiasm, and hoarse with hurnahs for Lester.

The excitement was thrilling and unprecedented. The exultation was contagious, and the most obtuse spectators were kindled as they looked upon the surging people below. An occasional glimpse of Lester or Gordon on the high piazza would touch the mass off in a roar of raptuous applause. "Ill just be d—d if any power on earth can put down a movement that has a demonstration like this!" said a profane, but levelheaded observer standing next to me.

As for me, I felt like Jim Banks is said to have felt at the St. Louis convention, which As for me, I felt like Jim Banks is said to have felt at the St. Louis convention, which was the first "big thing" he ever attended. "We can nominate Tilden," said a cautious objector to the young Warwick, "but we may not be able to elect him." "Elect nothing!" said Jim, gazing around on the multitude of delegates while his provincial bosom swelled with pride. "Why, there are enough yotes in this house right now to elect him."

The Felton men, acknowledging the force of the crowd, claimed that it was as much Felton as Lester. I do not think this claim had any foundation. There was hardly a sprinkle of Felton hurrah in the streets that hung above the crowd like a cloud. It was Lester-positive, definite, and almost unanimous. I did not discoverany notable Felton feeling among the people.

imous I did not discover any notable Felin feeling among the people.

It was a Lester demonstration, "pure and simple, and nothing else could be made out of it. Whatever was in it must be credited to the Lester cause. The Felton men may offset it by getting up a bigger crowd on starday. They cannot do it by deprecating to-day's business.

THE SPEECHES, ETC.

The speaking was arranged to take place in a grove about one mile from the hotel. The immense crowd straggled over this mile, ebbing against a handsome covered platform decorated with the names of Gordon, Colquitt, Hampton, and Lester. A number of seats had been provided, But at the first sit-down the crowd crushed them down. It was then a stand up audience, but one thoroughly full of humor and enthusiasm.

General Gordon opened the fight with an address of fine temper. He talked against a high and steady wind that, soughing through the thick pines, almost drowned his voice. His speech was a model, and evoked the very heartiest applause. The most striking thing about the speech was the wonderful evidence of personal popularity that it showed General fordon possessed. The slightest allusion to himself brought down the crowd. He found no sure touchstone than the recapitulation of the shanders that have been uttered against him in the campaign.

His speech was a general but earnest appeal for harmony and party organization. He made a most effective parallel between Felton's course and his own course, if as a confederate general on the field of battle, he had refused to ober 1 are field of battle, he and had fallen back on his powers as an independent. "Would I have been a good onfederate," he asked, "if I had refused to obey the general of our forces and had, when urged to do duty, have turned my guns on the gray coats at my side instead of the blue coats in my side instead of the blue coats in my first. Would I have been a good confederate if I had been seen riding during the battle in close and affectionate discourse with General Ulysses Grant? How, then, an Felton be a good democrat when every shot he fires is on his democratic comrades, and his almost constant companion is General Zach Hargrove?"

After a most exhaustive appeal for the democratic party General Gordon closed his address to the whites, and turned to the black people. A large crowd of these were present—some of them bringing Lester banner, General Gordon gave them a long, maint and candid talk—the burden of which was a denial of the absurd rumor that I Lester was elected they would all be put back into slavery. At the close of his talk he asked every negro that intended to vote for Lester to raise his hands. At this re-then jumping several feet in the air, came down with a whoop and was lost in the darkness. And as I write, the train-ped-dler jostled out of his non-partisan character by the excitement of the occasion and is crying, "Lester oranges and Lester vegetable ivory" at the top of his voice. And I dropped my pencil and fell to wondering if it is not possible that the rumer, alleged to have been started by the Felton men, that the barbeeued meats for to-day had been poisoned, was not possibly true after all. If so, I carry twenty deaths in my system.

THE GENERAL CAMPAIGN—ITS WORK FROM THE GENERAL CAMPAIGN-ITS WORK FROM

Will Lester beat Felton? .

I think he will—without any doubt. My A GRAND OCCASION.

Seriously, I never saw such a demonstration in my life. "There are over 15,000 people here," says General Gordon as I write. The broad streets were fairly jammed, reminding one of the rush in our thorough fare on Rex night. It was a coming together of the clans, such as used to throng the Soutish heaths. they have had a good deal of gush and bun-combe in their campaign, they have had also the most thorough method and disci-nline

It was my opinion, expressed at the time, that Lester's denunciation of Felton as being in a certain hypothesis, "an unmitigated liar," was a powerful lick.

It is my opinion now that those three words decided this campain. I do not mean that the abuse contained in them amounted to anything, or that Dr. Felton deserved even their suppositious application. But I think they were all-powerful in forcing Felton to change the plan of his campaign—a plan under which he had been terrible and indeed invincible.

In his former campaigns, Felton had been accustomed to go straight for his opponents and frazzle them out. Few men could stand up against him—no man who planted himself upon a specific and cold-blooded defense. In his opening speech on Lester and vindictive in his method. For two hours he arraigned him in a philippic that was never excelled for bitterness or resource. If Lester had have adopted the usual style of explaining and defending, Felton would have kept him bewildered with a swarm of small and various charges, and have finally, broken him down.

With an inspiration that is generally ascribed to Providence, but that I knew came from Pike Hill, and Lester's own sense of wounded honor, he repelled the assaults with superb and BURNING SCORN AND INDIGNATION, delivered with thrilling effect never excelled delivered with thrilling effect never excelled in the dramatic style.

BURNING SCORN AND INDIGNATION,

Those three words—the spasm of passion in which they were uttered, and the rapturous applause with which they were received—utterly broke down Felton's proposed plan of campaign. It discomitted him and his supporters, and two days afterward, at Dalton, he regretted that "he had been betrayed into some personal assaults that he should not repeat." And from that day on Lester had the "go" on the old man. The thing was reversed. With dauntless pluck, Lester kept abuses out of his limits, and made a sharp and aggressive campaign. He sought Felton instead of awaiting him, and his friends looked for victory rather than disaster when they met.

lisaster when they met. As to the thoroughness of the work done in the campaign by the Lester men, I may mention that Lester hinself has made eighty-four speeches, and, has shaken hands with two-thirds of the white voters of this district, and has been in nearly every precinct from Dade to Cobb. He has been tireless and ubiquitous. Besides this there have been speeches provided to meet every Felton man that mounted a stump, no matter where it was. Colonel Jim Brown, Colonel Joel Branham and others have been ready at all times to take up the glove for Lester. Latterly, General Gordon has given his whole time to this district, and has made daily speeches. There have been scores of active workers everywhere. Barbecues have been arranged without stint. Brass bands have been used plentifully. Documents have been scattered from one end of the district to the other. Meetings have been held, clabs have been organized, and all the details of the campaign have been attended to. Every inch of the ground have been covered and clavered-thickly. Money and labor has been expended wherever and whenever needed.

As to the system and organization with which the work has been done, EIGHTY-FOUR SPEECHES.

train down was to hurry out. From each station, we left them stringing after the departing train for full fifty yards. The regular excursion train of over twenty cars, which followed, was packed to its utmost expacity, on top and inside, and still hundred were left on the sides of the track. At 9:30 the train from the upper end arrived. It hatted at the upper end of the village, and the vast crowd went out to meet it, shouting for lester, and hurrahing for the newcomers. The train—a long one of twenty-three cars—was literally packed. The cars were crowded to suffocation, and on the top of very car, and on the platforms, there ever thick clusters of men, waving Lester fags, yelling like the devil, and gesticulating like mad men. Even the tender and foot-boards of the engine were filled. As the enormous crowds poured from the cars, the large area between the St. James and the track

THE FRENCH ELECTIONS.

London, November 1.—The results of last Sunday's elections for municipal delegates in the 17,000 communes of France as far as in the 17,000 communes of France as far as known leave no doubt of the issue of the senatorial contests in January next. The returns are not complete, but those received go to show that eleven departments now represented by 27 conservative senators have been won by the republicans, namely: Herault, Illecet, Vilaine, Indre et Loire, Lot et Garrone, Manche Marne, Mayenne, Meuse, Nord and Puy de Dowe. The republicans having lost no department, this gain is more than sufficient to return a majority in the senate. A republican majority of at least 12 or 15 is confidently expected.

THE canvass in the fourth district continues to be exceedingly warm. Captain Persons, considering the fact that he has very little chance of election, is making a gallant fight, and Mr. Harris, on his part, has left no portion of the district uncovered; so that whatever else may be said no complaint can be made that the voters are ignorant of the position of the two candidates. The latest contribution to the campaign is a cartoon, presumably from the pencil of Matt O'Brien, showing the condition of things at Columbus if Persons could have his way in voting against all congressional appropriations. The cartoon tells its own story. The river is full of snags and obstructions, vultures sit upon the rocks, the steamer Gunby Jordan is dismantled and for saken, and the Eagle and Phoenix factory is in ruins. Upon the whole, as we have said, the campaign continues warm.

War May Grow Out of It.

Clockmati Enquirer.

"This government," says the secretary, "must regard the pretensions that the legislature of Newfoundland can regulate our fishermen's enjoyment of treaty rights as striking at the treaty itself." This is serious and even warlike talk. It is no light thing to charge upon a power the violation of solemn treaty obligations. Mr. Evarts calls it a "vital question." When this delaration is followed by the significant statement that "before a receipt of a reply from her majesty's government, it would be premature to consider what should be the course of this government should this limitation upon freaty privileges of the United States be insisted upon the British government as their construction of the treaty, "the situation becomes really grave, and almost martial. Smaller questions in history have led to war. The government of the United States has taken a position upon-this question from which it cannot honorably recede. If England adheres to the theory asserted, or, at least intimated by Lord Salisbury, there is a conflict. If both nations adhere and differ touching so important a matter as the observance of a treaty, the result is war.

Trenty Above Statute.

New York Tribune.

The case is a simple one. The legislature of Newfoundland assumes the right to abridge be statute the privileges which the British government has conferred upon the citizens of the United States by treaty, and for which we have United states by treaty, and for which we have agreed to pay a prepeterously high price. If it can abridge them in one or two particulars it can in others, and so it can practically take them away altogether. It is no answer to say that these statutes are general regulations for the management and preservation of the fisheries, applicable alike to the fisherisen of the dominion and to those of the United States. General regulations can be so framed that while in terms they apply to natives and foreigners equally, in practice they shall bear only upon the foreigner. And moreover, the right to decide what are general and equal regulations has not been conceded to the provincial authorities. No principle of international law is charer than that a right conferred by treaty cannot be medified or abridged by statute.

Botto Globe.

If the treaty, ratified by both the general governments, is to be interpreted by the colonial authorities or a mob of Newfoundland fishermen, to suit their peculiar views and interests, and if its provisions are to be chromoscribed by the petty legislation of a province, then it is time to abolish the colonial results are the six and one-half mil-

On this side of the border, at least, there can be not one response to the position our government as taken. HINTS GROCERS.

IT IS POOR POLICY

For any retail merchant to sell infe goods because he can make more money on them. Instead of trying to find the cheap that can be bought, he should always select THE BEST in the market. We know of no business anywhere, in the city or country, that would not sooner become permanently established, and in the long run pay better, by handling only fair and honest goods. To be sure, custom may for a while be allured by low prices into the purchase of inferior and adulterated articles; many even take up with short weight and other swindling; but time rights all these things, and nothing is more certain than that

HONESTY IS THE BEST POLICY MEN DO BUSINESS TO MAKE MONEY! The surest way to accomplish this is to build up a permanent trade. This can not be successfully done if inferior goods are sold. It is only by keeping the best articles of their kind, even if they do not pay the largest immediate profit, that a permanent business is built up. Keep the best soap, the best starch, the best spices, the best baking powder, and so on through the whole list. We have known a greeer to lose a customer whose trade was worth a hundred and fifty dollars a year clear profit to him, just because he would not supply a baking powder that was demanded by the best trade.

Hawkinsville Dispatch: On Wednesday night last, about a quarter to 9 o'clock, the gin-house of Mr. John Scarborough was discovered to be on fire. Mr. Scarborough started immediately to the burning building, which was about one hundred yards from his dwelling. Upon a minute's reflection, he re-entered his house, seized his pistol and ran hurriedly down the road, thinking that the incendiary was somewhere near. As he ran down the road, his was a man running from him and he began firing upon the fire was discovered in perhaps a minute after it had been started, but the flames spread rapidly, and in a few minutes the building and its contents were consumed. The loss, besides the building, gin, etc., consisted of twenty bales of cotton and the seed from thirty-three bales. Mr. Scarborough saw that there was no chance, from the first discovery, to extinguish the fire, and at once his suspicions on a certain man, and they appeared well grounded. On Saturday

Ty-Ty (Ga.) correspondence Savannah News: On the 19th day of October, 1878, in the swamp of Ty-Ty creek, near the north line of Colquitt county, Ga., was discovered by one N. B. Whittington the remains of some unknown human being. The place where these remains were discovered was about one hundred yards from the east side, in a broad oak swamp, about one-fourth of a mile in width. The place where this discovery was made was about three-fourths of a mile from the residence of any person, and about one-half mile from any road. On the 24th day of October, 1878, F. Clark, acting coroner, with many others, assembled acting coroner, with many others, assembled at the spot where the remains lay. A jury was organized and the coroner proceeded with his inquest, but after a long and tedious examination of a lot of old faded papers, little information was gained calculated to aid in the identification of the remains.

There was a small privated book found emong aid in the idertification of the remains. There was a small printed book found among other papers that showed dates as late as 1874, the same showing that the unknown deceased had been in existence since that date. We found the address of T. C. Statham, Rome, Ga., also the address of T. C. Statham, Princeton, New Jersey. The following articles were also found: One violin and case, one satchel, one single case patent lever silver watch, one diploma case, two files, two pocket knives, three razors, one eyeglass, one soldering pipe, one pair of nippers, one pair of forceps, one silver hald dollar, and one -ambrotype about 4x6 inches, bearing the likeness of a beautiful girl, supposed to be from eight to twelve years of age. The articles in possession of the unknown person tell that he was a watchmaker. I make the above report for the benefit of the relatives and friends of the deceased, on this 27th day of October, 1878. I was informed that about two years ago there was a man traveling through the adjoining neighborhood calling his name Johnson, who had in his rossession the joining neighborhood calling his name Johnson, who had in his possession the identical articles above described, who claimed to have a permanent home in the state of Connecticut. We hope every newspaper editor in the United States will use every exertion in his power to assist us in this matter. Don't let innocence cry beneath the bloody hands of villainy, if such be the case.

Theatre-goers, club visitors, late supper-takers and patrons of the horse railroad owl trains, should all certainly have a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup convenient. Gentle-men, you will need it.

II. That when common fame charged Mr.
F. E. Block, a deacon of the Atlanta Central church, with having violated a law of the church in connection with dancing, it was the duty of the session of said church to investigate this charge, in obedience to the commands of the general assembly, as contained in its deliverances made in answer to overtures of Drs. Ross and Dabney and the presbytery of Atlanta, in the year 1865–1869 and 1877. 865, 1869 and 1877.

III. That the proceedings of said session n conducting the trial to which this investigation led were irregular.

In failing to pecify with sufficient particularity in the charge what law of the church had been riolated.

In failing to observe the requirements of the Book of Discipline, in heavet A section 5.

In including in the hapter 4, section 5. 3. In including in the pecifications of offenses not set orth in the charge.

IV. That the decision of the said session was not sustained by the evidence.

V. Therefore, on these grounds, the synod everses the decision of the presbytery of Atlanta in this case, and the sentence pro-nounced upon Mr. F. E. Block by the sesion of the Atlanta Central church and it restores Mr. Block to the privileges of Elder J. P. McCowen should have been recorded as voting against sustaining the appeal. His name merely slipped in the list to a place where it did not belong.

In the remarks of Rev. J. C. Grow he In the remarks of Key, J. C. Grow ne stated that the proceedings of the Block trial before the session were only regular in part, but that there were irregularities which would justify sustaining the appeal.

HOW THE CASE STANDS. The notice of Dr. Leftwich that he would The notice of Dr. Leftwich that he would either appeal the case or make a complaint to the general assembly relative to the action of the synod, will make the case stand in statu quo. Pending this appeal or complaint, whichever it be, Mr. Block is still suspended from the privileges of church membership. The appeal or complaint goes to the general assembly of the Southern Presbyterian church, the highest court of that denomination. The assembly will meet in Louisville on the third Thursday of next May. The body is composed of about one hundred and fifty members.

There are sixty-three presbyteries in the church, and each of these is entitled to be church, and each of these is entitled to be represented by one clergyman and one elder. If the membership of a presbytery exceed twenty-five, then it is entitled to two clergymen and two elders in the assembly. The general assembly is one of the most august church tribunals that assembles in this country. It is composed of the best talent in a church noted for its able and Godly were. The arread will be carried up the ma church noted for its able and Godly men. The appeal will be carried up by Dr. Leftwich, and in the prosecution of it he will probably be assisted by some of the ablest men in his church. The synod has appointed Rev. James Woodrow, D.D., Rev. James Nall, D.D., and Elder Clifford Anerson to represent the synod in the assem-ly. The final verdict in this case will be nticipated with anxiety all over the South.

WITHOUT DAY THE "KING" UNDER THE WEATH

WHAT IS THE CAUSE OF IT? That is the question that a Constitution eporter put to Judge Strong, the veterar ouyer of the city.

"In the first place," he said, "it is because of the disturbances, financial and political, in Europe. The failure of the Glasgow and and the nenewal of the Russo-Turkish could be a put of the price down."

bank and the nenewal of the Russo-Turkish frombles have put the price down."

"What do you think of the future tendency of prices?"

"It is hard to tell. No man has made up his mind yet. Everything is uncertain. I do not look, however, for any reliable advice. There may be little upward spurts, but they will not amount to anything. If we should have a war in Europe, which I do not expect, there is no telling where prices will go to. I should sell if I were a farmer."

A QUESTION OF FERSIONETS.

A QUESTION OF FREIGHTS. "Another reason for the low price here, and the falling off in our receipts, is that the railroad pool has ruined us on the freight tariff. With our freights of last year we were able to concentrate cotton here. We can not do this low. The small towns that can not do this Sow. The small towns that have heretofore shipped to us can now ship to New York just as cheap as we can. Of course everything added to freights comes off of the price of cotton. Last year we had a rate of 50 and 60 cents a hundred. This year we pay 86 cents. This is an enormous and offensive tariff, but the pool has set the pattern and the roads all seem disposed to stick to it." stick to it. Colonel Bedell agreed with Judge Strong and was even more pointed on the subject of freights. "The pool," he says, "has deprived us of the legitimate benefit w prived us of the legitimate benefit we should have from our competing roads. We have four lines to New York, and yet the rates are fixed just as arbitrarily as if we only had one line. I understand that Selma and Montgomery have a rate of 50 cents to New York, while we pay 85 cents. Of course this gives them an immense advantage over us. Why, Rome and Athens can each one ship to New York cheaper than Atlanta can. This is, of course, altogether wrong. It costs us now as much to ship to Savannah as it used to cost us to ship to New York. Unless we get a fair showing on freights our receipts will go down 25,000 or 50,000 bales. A quarter of a cent on cotton will control it.
